I'm not robot!

A professional resume template is a job-application document that outlines your work history, education, skills, professional achievements, and shows why you're the best candidate for the job. Enhancv's resume builder is customizable and easy to adapt to any field or experience. Our 1000 design combinations will ensure you can build a resume that's unique, elegant, and delivers the right message across. The best resume template for your case will depend on your unique set of skills, qualifications, and professional background. What's more, its design will change when you consider the company you're applying for, the job title in question, and, your personality. Our designers made each resume template you see above in accordance with different levels of experience, or types of industries. We've got you covered with a perfect template, be it for a traditional, or creative job, senior or entry-level position. You can also always start from scratch and build your own template, as with Enhancv you'll have access to 1000s of design combinations. Using a resume template is not the end of the world. In fact, it can save you time, and you won't have to think about missing an important section, or messing up the formatting. Whether it's a template you based your resume on, shouldn't be on top of your priority list. Instead, focus on tailoring the contents of your resume to each job. What's more, using the "Resume Tailoring" feature in the Enhancv builder will help you not to miss out any important skill or requirement from the job description that you should be talking about in your resume. There are three basic resume formats to choose from, and they all revolve around your professional background. In case you've got consistent job history, stick with a reverse-chronological resume format, that uses a timeline order of your previous employments. The functional resume format focuses on your transferable skills and is useful for career changers. Finally, the hybrid (or combination) resume format is a blend of the two - you still have a career progression timeline, but sections with skills and accomplishments are also present. The Enhancv templates you see above represent all of those formats, though the combination resumes prevail. Your resume in 2022 should hit the sweet spot between showing your professional achievements and personality uniquely. There's no law that prohibits you from stating who you are, both as an individual, and as a professional, on your resume. On the contrary, it is becoming ever more important to stand out in the recruitment process and catch the eye of the recruiter with a resume that sparks attention. On a resume, you should include: Neatly organized header Resume summary or resume objective Work experience coupled with professional accomplishments Education and certifications Skills section Additional information, pertaining to the job offer (awards, hobbies and interests, language skills, etc.) Notice that Enhancv builder will offer you to drag and drop sections yourself and create a professional resume that's truly yours. Meanwhile, if you need additional advice, head over to our Resume Examples section and search for specific resume tips for your case. There are two types of skills you should talk about within your resume - hard skills and soft skills. The job description will likely contain every technical requirement that they're looking for in candidates. So, you should strive to add as much as possible of those to your resume, without being dishonest. Use a simple Skills' section list for that. When it comes to soft skills, find a subtle way to talk about them within your resume. You've got plenty of ways to do that through Enhancv templates - within your experience or summary, or through our staple section such as Passions, Strengths, Most Proud Of, and Day of My Life. Large and unexplained employment gaps leave a bad impression on recruiters. What you can do is note down the reason for unemployment - be it a personal time off to improve physical and/or mental well-being, family matters, or career advancement activities. Job hopping is another red flag that's frowned upon. If you're changing jobs on a whim without sound enough reasons, you'll have an increasingly hard time scoring the job you've always wanted. As long as each of your jobs' experience is relevant to the position you're applying for, you shouldn't worry about how many they are. It's best to keep it between 10 and 15 years of experience for senior candidates, and one or two pages long in terms of resume length. In this case, you'll list between 3 and 7 jobs. Make sure your cover letter design matches your resume's, and their contents complement each other. Whereas in your resume template, you list your accomplishments, in the cover letter, you can expand on a particular event and explain why you're the right person for the job. If you need inspiration for how to build your cover letter, check out our library of , real cover letter examples. PDF is the most versatile resume format for jobseekers. Almost all modern job application systems can read PDF files, and it will ensure that your resume arrives intact, no matter what kind of software the HR manager uses to open it. However, do follow the job application instructions and, if it says they need your resume as a doc file, you can always send along a doc version of your resume. Microsoft Word or Google free resume templates are good enough for old-school, traditional resumes, but they are not useful to build modern resume formats and won't appeal to every job-seeker or recruiter. Their editors can be clunky, and even a single accidental keystroke can make your whole resume structure fall apart. Enhancv resume builder contains templates that are easily editable, so you can customize your resume to any modern format.
